There are two types of Estates, Testate (with a will) and Intestate (without a will). In Texas a Succession should be opened and a Judgment of Possession obtained if there is immovable property (this includes mineral interests) located in County where the decedent last resided or where the property located. A Judgment of Possession acts as title to the immovable property and mineral interest or leases and the deceased heirs are recognized and placed into possession of that property. With a Testate (will) Succession, the will is probated and if necessary an Executor of the Succession Appointed to represent the Estate and eventually the heirs are placed into possession of the property. In this case,

Payment of revenue will be made to a Testate Estate if under administration as follows:

1. Order admitting will to probate
2. Copy of the Will
3. Letter of Testamentary Executor or Executrix from a Texas Court

Upon the completion of the Succession under administration,

4. A Judgment of Possession recognizing the heirs
5. Dismissal of Executor or Executrix

If a deceased owner is from another State, and had a will, the following is required:

1. Probate of the will
2. Letters of Testamentary Executor or Executrix issued
3. Ancillary Proceedings in Texas

Payment of revenue will be made to Testamentary Executor or Executrix until the Succession is completed, then the following is required:

4. Judgment of Possession
5. Dismissal of Executor or Executrix
